UNUSUAL EXPERIENCE

Monument Marks the Locale
of The Mountaineer's Visions

By Alfred T. Newberry
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

CUMBERLAND, Md., July 6.—These mountaineers of the Alleghenies are not superstitious. Some folks tried to have their acquaintances believe they "saw" a young miner, killed in 1923 by police during a labor grievance, appear one night outside of his old mine at Frostburg. The residents listened to the yarn and then indicated with their finger to their head that "something was wrong" with the story-tellers.

Tales of the supernatural receive little attention among the mountain folk. "Hex-doctors" do not tarry long in this vicinity when they stray from their more profitable "practices" in some sections of rural Pennsylvania. But ask them about the two dreams Jacob Dibert had down in his Blue Lodge home seventy-three years ago! The dreams the mountaineer experienced are not legend here nor in the adjacent mountain country. They're fact. They will never be forgotten. It's related in the Sunday School classroom; frequently used as the basis of a sermon by ministers. To perpetuate the story the residents gather once a year at Pavia, Bedford county, Pennsylvania, forty miles from here, to commemorate the remarkable vision that came to Jacob Dibert.

A monument marks the locale of the mountaineer's dreams. Every year the residents gather around it and their services continue all day. The crowds increase in number every year. Everybody in Cumberland has heard the weird tale and are anxious to visit the spot, see the monument and hear the old folks relate the story amid the countryside the seemingly incredible event occurred. The services are called "Commemoration Services for the Lost Children of the Alleghenies." The records show that Samuel Cox heard his dogs barking in the woods on the morning of April 14, 1856. He went out with his shotgun to shoot the squirrel he knew his dog had treed. Returning sometime later his two sons, George, seven, and Joseph, six, were not in the house. He was told they had followed him to the woods.

He hurriedly retraced his steps. The still woodlands echoed his yells. After calling for George and Joseph to answer he would listen. There would be no sound. The hysterical father returned and summoned his neighbors. A systematized search was started. Each day the searching party increased in number and by the sixteenth day, when practically every section of the countryside was tramped and the searchers abandoned hope of finding the children alive or even their bodies, the party totaled 5,000 men.

Dream Appears

The father returned to his home near Pavia a broken man. It is not chronicled whether Jacob Dibert took part in the search. But fourteen days after the boys vanished he dreamed he saw them lying beneath a tree near a stream in Spruce Hollow. The search was still in progress and he told the men of his vision. They didn't believe it. A day or so later the same dream returned to Dibert. The identical scenes appeared before his eyes and he saw the two little boys lying beneath the tree. This time he did not tell any of those who had been reaching for the children to escape further.

SUPERVISORS HELD FOR MAINTAINING NUISANCE

Prominent Newtown Business
Men Condemn Condition
Of the Road

FALSE TEETH BROKEN

DOYLESTOWN, July 6.—Ten well known business and professional men of Newtown and vicinity testified at a hearing before Justice Irvin M. James that the road supervisors of Newtown township are maintaining a public nuisance by failing to keep in proper repair, the township road between Newtown and Richboro.

Justice James released the supervisors on their own recognizance in the sum of $300 to appear at the September term of criminal court for trial. They are Alexander Chambers, Charles Shuster and C. P. Willis. Willis is sick and was not present at the hearing.

Arrest of the supervisors was brought about by Roland W. Porter, who lodged the information. He is the manager of the Nesheim Farms on the Newtown and Richboro road.

One witness for the complainants testified the highway is so rough that he recently broke his false teeth while riding in his automobile over it. Others described the highway as unsafe for travel at all times. Newtown merchants and business people lose thousands of dollars, others testified, because farmers and others drive to other places rather than travel on the road in question leading into town.

No defense was offered by the supervisors other than that they have had no money to make repairs.

Witnesses testified that offers of money and material had been made to the supervisors to fix road, but that in spite of this it has not been repaired in two years.

Among those who condemned the road were Allen W. Porter, Morris Savidge, Louis Kenderline, Dr. G. A. Parker, Dr. E. E. Pownall, Charles W. Rockhill, John Fry, Jr., Stanley Watson, Peter H. Morris and Edward B. Watson, representing the Keystone Automobile Club.

Mr. Watson testified that he had received scores of complaints about the road, asking him to urge the automobile club to take action against a road that was described to him as "the most dangerous and unfit for travel in eastern Pennsylvania."

At the hearing the Commonwealth was represented by Thomas Ruck and the defendants by William Stuckert, of Newtown.

"THE GOLDEN RULE"

By Rev. George F. Hess
(Pastor, Bristol M. E. Church)

"All things whatsoever ye would, that men should do to you, do ye even so unto them."—Matthew, 7:12.

The Golden Rule of Christ will bring the golden age to man. That golden age will be marked by the justice of general plenty in the unselfish distribution of God's good things and in a Christian friendly interest in the personal joy and welfare of every other person. Jesus came to establish such a kingdom of holy love and justice throughout the world.

The Golden Rule was negatively expressed by Confucius in China long before Jesus came: "Do not unto others what you would not have them do unto you." The big advance that Jesus made was that He lived it, and His unselfish life has been a challenge to all generations.

Christ's Golden Rule practically asks us to take the same interest in others' welfare as in our own. The body cannot neglect the suffering of one of its members. We should not endeavor to live at others' expense, and society should not organize itself as not to be unjust to any individual. It is good to be thankful to God for His blessings, but the most Christian "grace" that could be said before a loaded table is, "Oh, Lord, forgive my over-eating or wasting this food when so many go hungry." A judge disposed of the case of a man arrested for stealing a loaf of bread for his family by fining every man in the court room the price of a loaf of bread and him self one dollar. That was Golden Rule Justice.

The Golden Rule of Christ is positive. "Do unto others." Take the initiative in doing good for yourself and every other self likewise. Do it first. Start something. Life is ordered on the investment plan. Your own shall come back to you. To make money, invest money; to gain love, invest love. When all share happiness each shall have his share. "Do unto others as ye would that they do unto you."

"Where Do You Live?" has been chosen by the Rev. George E. Boswell, rector of St. James's Episcopal Church, as the topic for his sermon at the union service in the Bristol M. E. Church tomorrow evening at 7.45. The Harmony Trumpeters of Philadelphia will furnish music for this service.

BLUE MOON HOSIERY GIRLS
SEE NEW YORK CITY BY BUS

Sightseeing Trip Indulged In
By 38 Young Women
On Holiday

THE ITINERARY IS GIVEN

The girls of the Blue Moon Hosiery Mill, at Croydon, enjoyed a sightseeing tour of New York City on July 4th. The trip was made via bus and was sponsored by Mrs. George W. Miller, of 117 Mulberry street.

The party, thirty-eight in number, left Bristol at 6.45 a. m. and their itinerary was as follows: Through Holland Tunnel Park to New York City, down to Battery Park where they viewed the Statue of Liberty and enjoyed a trip through the Aquarium; then journeyed up lower Broadway as far as Trinity Church, Woolworth Building and City Hall, where a short stop was made; out 21st street, past Roosevelt's birthplace and over to the docks where the group was escorted on a tour of one of the large ocean steamers.

In the early part of the afternoon the party witnessed a performance at the Roxy Theatre, then entered the bus again and resumed their sightseeing tour up Fifth Avenue over to Morningside Heights, where they saw the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, Grant's Tomb, then down Fifth Avenue again to 48th street to the Palais d'Or where they enjoyed a sumptuous dinner and show.

After dinner a trip to Greenwich Village and Chinatown proved an interesting feature of the tour; then up Broadway to 42nd street where they circled Times Square, down Seventh Avenue passing Pennsylvania Station and Pennsylvania Hotel.

The young women returned to their homes well pleased with their day's outing.

First Love Still Holds

Not many actresses get the chance to turn down the figures on the contract which was offered Ethel Barrymore to appear in a talkie movie. She said she did not like her first appearance in the silent films some years ago and thinks the talkies are terrible, although film experts say that her voice is ideal. She'll stick to her first love—the stage.

SHENANDOAH VALLEY
MECCA FOR TOURISTS

Country Filled With Natural Scenic Wonders and Good Roads

MANY SCENES MARKED

Down the historic Shenandoah Valley, through country filled with natural scenic wonders, run excellent motor trails leading to the famous cavern territory of the Virginia hills. Through this section the Keystone Automobile Club has mapped a tour that will carry the motor enthusiast through Maryland and Virginia to the Shenandoah National Park on a most interesting and attractive week-end outing.

"The section is alive with memories of Civil War episodes, many scenes being appropriately marked with monuments and tablets and the adjacent countryside abounds in natural rugged scenery unequalled elsewhere in the United States," says Russell B. Carty, representative of the automobile club. "From Gettysburg south to Luray Caverns, through the famous national park and back through Hagerstown to Chambersburg, the journey is made without going over the same road twice, except at Winchester where two of the highways used cross each other. Excellent accommodations can be found in any of the larger towns enroute so the travellers may drive as far as they wish before stopping for the night."

From Bristol the tour leads over the Boulevard following the Lincoln Highway over City Line avenue to Lancaster Pike. Following this road, marked as national route 30 the journey continues through Paoli, Coatesville, Lancaster, York and into Gettysburg. The battlefields here mark the point reached by the Confederate troops who fought their way up the Shenandoah Valley through territory over which the motor tour leads.

From Gettysburg southward over national Route 15, the tour leads through Emmitsburg and country marked on all sides with memories of the historic struggle between the north and south. One mile north of Frederick stands "Rose Hill," the home of Thomas Johnson, Maryland's first governor. In Frederick is the reconstructed home of Barbara Fritchie and a monument reared to her memory can be seen in Mount Olivet Cemetery where the famous heroine is buried. Here, too, lies Francis Scott Key, composer of the national anthem. The Old Stone Tavern, the Revolutionary Barracks and the Court House, where the "Twelve Immortal Judges" first reputed the British Stamp Act, are all well worth visiting.

Twenty miles below Frederick is Harper's Ferry, the scene of John Brown's raid, and also a point where the boundaries of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia join. Through the quaint towns of Charlestown and Berryville, past the Antietam battlefields, the journey leads into Winchester, from where Sheridan started his famous ride. Here headquarters are among a score of interesting landmarks that can be viewed here. From this point the tour leads down the Shenandoah pike, marked as national Route 11, lined on either side by famous caverns.

Lying within a radius of 70 miles are a number of these underground wonderlands of scenic beauty, which open to tourists an array of nature's handiwork to be seen no where else.

ITALIAN MAN IS STRUCK BY AUTO;
DIES AT HOSPITAL

Rossario Riggio, 65, of Chestnut Street, is The Victim

SKULL IS FRACTURED

En Route to Visit Daughter's Grave; Car Driven By Louis Grilli

Enroute to the cemetery where he was in the habit of going to look after the grave of his daughter an Italian man of Bristol was struck by an automobile and so seriously injured this morning that he died at 9.30.

The dead:
Rosario Riggio, 65, 1023 Chestnut street, Bristol.

Riggio was struck by an automobile driven by Louis Grilli, 329 Wood street, son of the pastor of the Apostolic church, Wood and Walnut street.

Grilli took the injured man to the Harriman Hospital and State Highway Patrol, South Langhorne, was notified of the accident. An officer of the Patrol came to Bristol and took Grilli before Justice Laughlin where he was admitted to $2,000 bail to await the outcome of the injuries to Riggio.

According to Grilli and witnesses to the accident Riggio was walking down the Bristol Pike at a point near the Bristol cemetery. He was on the left hand side of the highway. Grilli was driving up the highway toward Bristol on his right hand side.

"I blew my horn as I saw the man and thought that he saw me," said Grilli. "When I was within about 10 feet of him he stepped toward my car." The rear left fender of Grilli's car struck the man. The fender was dented and Riggio was terribly bruised about the head and one hand. He suffered a compound fracture of the skull.

Riggio, it is said, has made it a custom to walk to St. Mark's Cemetery every Saturday where he looks after the grave of his daughter to whom he was very much attached. He goes to the cemetery to water the flowers, cut the grass and is said to often kneel in prayer.

Riggio's wife and a married son are also residents of Bristol.

THE WORM TURNS
The "overworked" business man launched the movement against special "weeks" and "days." The general public sustained his objections. Now the teaching profession has declared war to the finish on this greedy parasite on time.

When the American Educational Digest sent questionnaires on this question to school superintendents and principals 800 of them registered complaints against this scheme of dividing the school term into special observance weeks and days. The replies of these administering educators indicated that the point has been reached when there is a special time for everything in the school year except for the curriculum. Ninety-one special "weeks" are observed in the public schools of the country each year. That means if one school could set apart each week of the term for the observance of one of the special "weeks" it could not complete the list in two years. It is obvious that not all of the schools are observing all the "weeks" they are called upon to observe. The educators characterize the "weeks" and "days" as "time stealers," "menaces to education," "something for hobby riders to do" and "special interest exploitation of the schools."

It will be conceded by all educators as well as the public that school children may obtain some benefit from two or three of the special observances and that the others benefit only their authors. The school term is so many months long. Within that prescribed period so much work must be done. The curriculum should be so broad in its scope that it touches upon every branch of knowledge necessary to education and culture. If the curriculum is complete then there is no need for special "weeks" and "days." If there is need for this "week" and that "day" then the curriculum is weak in just those places.

PLACING THE BLAME
One of the popular activities of the times, if not of all time, is that of placing responsibility on others. Sometimes it can be accomplished with a degree of success, but in other attempts they only turn out to be ridiculous. Public opinion may not always decide correctly, but it is known to determine definitely.

It is not consistent on the part of adults to complain if boys and girls imitate them, or even inaugurate some ideas of their own in the matter of apparel and conduct. Instruction which is not backed up by example is not likely to prove very effective in the matter of behavior and morals.

Some one has said that if you want to get the best results in character for a child you must begin with his grandparents. This principle if it ever had a place, must still obtain, for human nature is very much the same from one generation to another. What is the use? Posterity will come along and do about as it pleases anyhow.

There are too many light heads back of headlights.
Marriage seems to be one thing that is not likely to be taken too seriously.
Pure recklessness is the only reason that presents itself why some persons marry.

"The REDEEMING SIN"

By VIRGINIA MORRIS

BASED ON THE STORY BY L.V. JEFFERSON

SYNOPSIS: The Apache, Jetteur, has been responsible for the death of Fleurette's brother. She blames Dr. Raoul de Boise, however, and sets out to exercise revenge by making him fall in love with her. In the process she loses her heart to him. A rift comes in their romance for which she thinks the parish priest is responsible. To even accounts she robs the church.

CHAPTER X

THE two thieves—Fleurette and Jetteur—make their way stealthily to the sacristy. There Jetteur pries open a cupboard and locates the richly jeweled vessels. "Quick, take these," he orders Fleurette. "Hide them in that bag there and I'll meet you below. I'll have the door open for you—you know the way we came!" He disappears into the blackness and Fleurette is alone.

AT this very moment Raoul has reached the altar on his way from visiting with Father Colomb. In the corner of the church he sees a figure crouching low. The outline of a girl wearing a tam and a tight fitting sweater—such as he sometimes saw on Fleurette—becomes discernible. He walks quickly toward her and in the dim light of the sanctuary lamp he recognizes his sweetheart!

THE bundle in her arm tells him the object of her visit. "Fleurette! This is sacrilege, put them back," he pleads. She jerks her wrist free from the grip of his fingers. "I was a fool once and listened to you," she reminds him. Now she is running down the aisle, now she is raising the door in the floor and now she has disappeared completely from sight.

BUT Raoul follows through the same exit and hears a torrent of water sweeping past him. He is in that underground labyrinth, the Paris sewers which only the Apaches know. Running along the slimy ledge he overtakes the girl and Jetteur. The sharp steel of Jetteur's knife is plunged into his arm. He is precipitated into the black whirlpool while Fleurette shrieks "Save him, Jetteur!"

ST. ANN'S IX TROUNCED
BY THE BRISTOL A. C.

(By T. M. Juno)

Bristol A. C. had another of those good nights last evening when they trounced the St. Ann's team, 11 to 6. Unlike the exhibition they gave last Monday, the colored team went in there from the start and scored a quintet of runs in the initial frame. From then on the battle was all to the "Aces."

Marshall was serving them for the colored team, and was having an easy job of it. The last time Marshall twirled against the "Saints" he was driven from the box and he certainly got his revenge last evening. Twelve of the Dorrance street boys went out via the three strikes route, an average of over two an inning, only three players failing to fan, and were retired by other means.

Ten hits sang from the "Aces" bats, eight off Tulio and two off Tranotti who in his debut pitched the last two frames. Neither of the twirlers received any support to brag about.

G. White had a perfect average at bat with three consecutive singles. Stallone wielded the heaviest club against Marshall. He was responsible for five of the six St. Ann's runs. He drove in two with a triple, and later cleaned the sacks with a double.

Cooper's playing in centerfield was sensational.

Monday night the league schedule begins at the top, Emilie meeting the Hibernians.

Mysterious Return

Willard J. Elliott, Jersey banker, whose disappearance had the police worried, returned under circumstances as mysterious as his departure. His tale of being kidnapped is being challenged by the police who found him near his home, in his own car, calmly reading the news of his whereabouts. Four women witnesses have told of seeing Elliott taken away.

TULLYTOWN P. P. IX
TO MEET COLORED A. C.

The Tullytown paper mill team will meet the Bristol Colored A. C. on the Tullytown field Sunday.

George Obermier, manager of the Tullytown team has secured the services of "Lefty" Russo, sensational hurler of the Lambertville High School. This lad, although but seventeen years of age, has a remarkable record, having won nine and being undefeated for his school record and having won fourteen and lost one as a league record. The hurler is also a very heavy hitter and is a wonderful fielding pitcher.

"Eddie" Roe will be the receiver of Russo's slants. The shifting of Roe from shortstop to catcher has provided a hole at the short position. Cooper fielded the position well last week, but in doing so weakened the outfield. Carmen will play second base.

Game begins at 3.00 p. m.

CORNWELLS A. A. AND
BRISTOL A. A. TO CLASH

(By T. M. Juno)

Johnny Mulholland's Bristol A. A. nine will attempt to redeem itself on Sullivan's field when they will be host to the Cornwells A. A. team. The combat will begin at 6.00 p. m.

The A. A. lost the evening contest with the Holmesburg Hawks last Sunday and is certain that there will be a change this week.

Both teams have a good record thus far this season. Cornwells at one time boasted of a nine game winning streak and at the present time has a record of eleven victories and a lone defeat. DeRisli and Cline will be the local battery.

In the country. Each cave has its own particular grotesque group of stalactite shapes. The first reached are the Crystal Caverns at Strasburg and the Shenandoah Caverns at Mount Jackson come next. Near Newmarket are the Endless Caverns, while the journey would not be complete unless a visit was paid to the famous Luray Caverns where one of the scenes of beauty is the underground "Dream Lake" passage.

From Newmarket state Route 21 leads through Luray and winds a hilly course through Shenandoah National Park as far as Sperryville. The natural scenic grandeur of the Virginia mountains are seen at their best in this section. At Sperryville state Route 37 leads northward through Flint Hill, Riverton and into Winchester where national Route 11 continues northward through fertile farmland country into Martinsburg and Hagerstown. Crossing the Pennsylvania state line below Greencastle the tourists reach Chambersburg. From here the Lincoln Highway, national Route 30 brings the traveler back into Gettysburg from where the journey can be finished over the same route it started.

Thomas Callahan, of Philadelphia, is paying a week's visit to his grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Callahan, of Buckley street.

ridicule. He told his brother-in-law, Harrison Whysony, the story goes, and together they went to Spruce Hollow.

Dibert reached the scenes he saw so plainly in his dreams with little difficulty. A carcass of a deer he saw, those two nights as he lay in his Blue Lodge home was there. Some distance away he found the head of a deer and a little beyond that lay a child's shoe.

Found Bodies

The two searched around for the tree. Dibert knew what kind it was. Finally he saw it on the other side of the stream. They forded the water and found the two bodies. Joseph was lying with a coat beneath his head. Apparently he died first. George, the elder brother, was lying with his head on Joseph's body. The bodies were buried in Union Cemetery near Pavia with the monument marking the grave. A sister of the children is Mrs.

GRAND

A new and revolutionary development in the use of sound and speech will reach the screen in Douglas Fairbanks' "The Iron Mask," which comes to the Grand Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

While the voice of Fairbanks will be heard, there will be no dialogue. The spoken portions of the film will be in the nature of soliloquys in which Doug, as D'Artagnan, will address the audience and speaking directly to them, tell the intents of the characters and the motivations for their actions. In this manner the audience becomes a part of the living play instead of bystanders.

This method, akin to the "chorus" of the classic drama was chosen by Fairbanks as the logical and most artistic utilization of the spoken voice in a story which pictures the romantic glamour and pageantry of a bygone day. Sound effects and musical synchronization will be used throughout the production and it is not difficult to imagine the striking effects that are possible in such a romance as "The Iron Mask."

LIVE
where you work

Many people employed in Bristol are commuting to and from their work each day. This means an unnecessary expense and a waste of time. They must leave home earlier and return later than if they lived in the town where they are employed. They have less time for pleasure and less time to spend with their families than if they resided here.

Why commute?

Bristol as a place of residence offers every opportunity to be found in a large city. There are paved streets, sanitary sewers, good schools and churches of every denomination; periodic collection of ashes and garbage, police protection and ample space for outdoor recreation.

Housing is adequate

Housing facilities are adequate to meet the needs of all. There are dwellings here which will meet the needs of almost every family. Big six room houses with all modern conveniences including front porches and rear yards. They rent as low as $25 per month, and are comparable in type to those in the larger cities renting for nearly twice the amount.

You're a part of the community

If you live in Bristol you are a part of the community. You are not lost in the crowds of a great city where often times your next door neighbor doesn't know you. Live in Bristol and participate in its affairs and you will find life much more worth the living.
